Bassano, Thursday, July 14, 1932

Good old Kaye Don has recaptured the world motorboat speed record with "Miss England III." The record was lost to the Wood's of the American motorboat speed king, a few months ago. Don Kaye's "Miss England III" can still beat faster aeroplanes, faster automobiles, and faster motorboats than Uncle Sam. Kaye Don is laying low for the present, but he may spring a surprise with his new boat at the Harmsworth races in September.

The Calgary exhibition and stampede is over, and we are told it was a great success. The kids and cowboys had a good time, anyway. Whether the stampede paid expenses or not. Last year the stampede went into $10,000.

DANGER SIGN

NEVER ON HILL

The main highway through Glenora and Bassano is fairly well marked with road signs for railway crossings and curves, but there is one danger sign which has been marked—the Crowfoot hill, about 17 miles west of Bassano.

The serious accident which happened there last Saturday evening emphasizes the need of a danger sign at the hill. The four occupants of the car, all of whom had been years of age, were injured and their car completely wrecked. It was only by a bit of good fortune that they were not fatalities.

Perhaps the woman who was driving was inexperienced, and her advanced age may account in some measure for the inability to negotiate the hill when suddenly confronted with the steep slope of the road leading down to the Crowfoot bridge.

The spot, however, is a dangerous one. The hill is steep, and covered with loose gravel, and looking down from the top of the slope the bridge at the bottom appears quite close.

Actually it is wide enough for two cars to pass with ease. We would suggest that a sign reading "Danger—Steep Dip," or something of that nature, be placed on the road a hundred yards east of the hill. Motorists using the road for the first time would then know what to expect.

It would be wise to also put a danger sign on the west hill.

WHAT OF THE HUDSON'S HAY ROUTE?

If Canada proceeds with the building of the St. Lawrence Waterways what is to become of the Hudson's hay grain route on which millions of the taxpayers' money has been spent? The question is one which arouses serious thought.

The St. Lawrence Waterways will cost Canada about $70 million dollars. It will take ten years to build, and will permit ocean going vessels to come right up the St. Lawrence River and Great Lakes and load with Canadian grain at Port Arthur and Port Arthur. This will mean a considerable saving in transportation and handling costs.

The Hudson's hay route was built for the same purpose—to save handling and transportation costs on Canadian grain bound for Europe and British ports. It has not yet proven a commercial success and is still in the experimental stage.

Down the Great Lakes and St. Lawrence river has been the established grain route for many years. If the St. Lawrence Waterways project is built it is almost certain that the bulk of western Canada's grain and other farm products bound for the British Isles to Europe will still go this route in preference to the Hudson's hay route with its shorter shipping season and hazardous voyage through the ice fields in Hudson Strait.

Here we have two great public utilities, one already built and the other planned to be under construction soon, paid for by public money, and in competition with each other for the same class of business. What an absurd situation.

FIFTY-FIFTY

A mail order house recently received one of its catalogue pages pinned to a note reading "Send article—if good, will send cheque." hey replied with, "Send cheque—if good, will send article."

Soviet Russia led all other countries in the purchase of American industrial machinery last year.

That Was Different

"Mr. Nibbs," commenced the rather timid-looking young man—"er—ah—that is, can—I—will you?" "Why, yes, my boy, you may have her," smiled the girl's father. The young man gasped.

"What's this? Have whom?" he asked.

"My daughter, of course," replied Nibbs. "That's what you mean. You want to marry her, don't you?"

"Why, no, sir," said the young man. "I just wanted to know if you could lend me fifty dollars."

"Certainly not, sir," said Nibbs sharply. "Why, I hardly know you."

MANITOBA WANTS NO WHEAT QUOTA

WINNIPEG, July 18.—The government of Manitoba urges that Canadian dairy products be allowed free access to the markets of the United Kingdom, but sees no advantage in a United Kingdom quota for Dominion wheat plus Great Britain's total import of wheat. From all countries less than Canada's average exportable surplus.

The average annual income of physicians in the United States, as revealed by an American Medical Association survey, is $2,674.

News of the Week

PACT SIGNED FOR BUILDING ST. LAWRENCE WATERWAYS

WASHINGTON, July 18.—The St. Lawrence River treaty, signed for more than a decade to open the great mid-west with a seaway from the Great Lakes to the ocean, was signed today by the United States and Canada.

Henry L. Stimson, secretary of state, signed for the United States, and Hon. W. D. Herridge, Canadian minister to Washington, signed for Canada.

The agreement must be ratified by the Canadian parliament and the United States congress before it can become effective. Both parliament and congress also must appropriate funds for construction of much of the 27 foot deep waterways from the St. Lawrence river to the lakes. It will take 10 years to complete the project.

As the treaty was signed statements were issued by Premier R. B. Bennett and President Hoover, and the latter hailed the accomplishment as sufficient of the promise he had made to the people of the middle west in his campaign for election.

"The channel to be built," he said, "will admit practically 50 per cent increase in shipping of the world for goods from the New York, Ohio, Michigan, Indiana, Illinois, Wisconsin, and Minnesota."

The project will cost the two nations $45,000,000, an amount almost equally divided. In addition to opening the interior to navigation, it will be sufficient to produce 1,200 horsepower of electric energy.

JAPAN BEGINS NEW INVASION OF MANCHURIA

TOKYO, July 19.—The Japanese army began an invasion of the province of Jehol, last unoccupied section of Manchuria, and has clashed there with Chinese troops.

Despatches from Mukden said a battle occurred just inside the Jehol boundary line. Although details were lacking, the Japanese were said to have driven back the Jehol troops and started the march to Peiping, and a branch detachment of the Mukden-Chinchow railway.

The purpose of the expedition was reported to be the rescue of Denshiro Ishimoto, a former Japanese army officer, believed captured by the Chinese near Peiping.

SIR HENRY THORNTON RESIGNS FROM C. N. R.

OTTAWA, July 19.—Sir Henry Thornton has resigned as president of the Canadian National Railways, S. J. Hangerford, vice-president, will be acting president.

Questioned today, Hon. R. J. Manion, minister of railways and canals, made this announcement. Both the board of directors and the government have accepted the resignation of Sir Henry.

"It is true that Sir Henry Thornton has resigned his position as president and chairman of the Canadian National Railways," Mr. Manion stated. "In a letter written to me, as minister of railways, he says: 'In my opinion a publicly owned railway can only successfully direct if the management has the complete confidence of the owners of the property. The public criticism to which I have referred indicates that such confidence is, at least, not general, and in this period of financial depression, and in view of the further fact that a royal commission is investigating the whole railway situation of the country, I feel that I should tender my resignation.'"

Police are making their headquarters at the cabin, and are said to be maintaining a close watch on at least four men, any of whom might have carried a glove against Lee's situation to bring him under suspicion.

BALDWIN SEES DOUBLE OPPORTUNITY IN PARLEY

QUEBEC, July 18.—Night, Hon. Stanley Baldwin, leader of the British delegation, met in the Ottawa conference, a double opportunity. In a statement issued as the Empire of Britain arrived in Quebec tonight, Mr. Baldwin spoke first of the opportunity at Ottawa for making trade agreements and thus promote the well-being of every part of the empire. That was a cause which, for his own sake, lay close to his heart. But there was also another opportunity.

"We believe," Mr. Baldwin said, "that by the methods we adopt we can set an example to the whole world in breaking down obstacles to commerce, in aiding a revival of agriculture, industry, and trade, and so bring peoples safely through the traffic depression of recent times."

COMPROMISE OFFERED IN COAL MINERS' DISPUTE

CRUMHELD, July 18.—Officials of the United Mine Workers of America and representatives of eight of the larger mines in the Red Deer Valley held conference here Monday morning in an effort to reach an agreement on the finding of the conciliation board, in which no change in wages was recommended in the majority report.

The operators, however, refused to alter their stand in supporting the minority report, signed by W. C. Robertson, representative of the mine owners on the conciliation board, and the meeting finally adjourned, deadlocked.

THE FOG

(ten, scrambled upon the muddy bank, and plunged into the river. CHAPTER XXIII Anna was startled. Half a dozen times she had been in to Diana and found her sleeping always in the same position, lying on her side, her face turned against the pillows, an arm flung up above her head.

Half a dozen times since the early morning when Diana had come home, and now it was past five o'clock.

Mrs. Gladys had been into the room once before leaving for another bridge evening. "Has she been asleep all day?" she asked.

"Yes, madam, she seems thoroughly worn out."

Two poems, and a complete story, including altogether 2,100 words, have just been written on the two sides of an ordinary postcard. This record feat was performed by a resident of Munich, Germany.

A sloping muddy bank, broken away by much rain and weather; how the dry was nearer—almost at his feet, it seemed—and he answered it with a shout, cupping his hands around his mouth to make it carry farther.

"Hullo . . . there!" His own sense of helplessness was appalling; one might as well have been imprisoned by walls as by the blanket of increasing darkness. He shouted again with all the strength of his young voice, and then, suddenly, as if by a miracle, the fog bank seemed to break for the smallest fraction of a moment, like a curtain being slowly raised by a hooking hand in order to show him the thing he sought.

She was in the river . . . its width away from him . . . a half-dozen paces, clinging white. Trail heads to the overhanging bough of a rotting willow, her white face upturned, her flaming dark hair dark and horrible, her mouth wide open as if to give utterance to more than that waiting cry.

Jones caught his breath, instinctively he began to tear off his coat, when the fog came silently down again, shutting her out, leaving him there, shivering and helpless, on the muddy slippery bank.

It seemed a lifetime before he could nerve himself to fresh action. Everything was utterly unknown; the silently flowing river like a half dead poisonous snake creeping by at his feet, and the strange impenetrable menace of the fog-trapped world.

Jones seemed suddenly to see Diana's face; her blue eyes, her sensitive mobile face . . . "Little head running over with gold . . . Diana had been happy again if he left Miss Rosalie to die."

He was shivering from head to foot, as with his whole body strained forward he started and stared into the fog where she had been.

What was his wife there? What did her happiness matter that another's, so much more precious, should be sacrificed by it?

In the few seconds of his hesitation it seemed to Jones that he argued the whole question out with cold deliberation before, with an effort that seemed purely physical, he pulled himself together and deliberately set out to find her.

Let her die . . . nobody would ever know. "I would do anything in the world for you."

He had told Diana that more than once, and he had meant it with every fibre of his being. He was conscious of the great sense of triumph to think that even though Diana would never know he was fulfilling his promise.

Then the cry came again, strangled, weaker, more despairing, the cry that might have come from a child or from one of the lost lambs which he and Shurey had sought for together one bitter March month after a heavy fall of snow.

For one second still Jones hesitated, standing rigid, his head forward in strained attention; then he turned back with quiet deliberation.

For one second still Jones hesitated, standing rigid, his head forward in strained attention; then he turned back with quiet deliberation.

He had told Diana that more than once, and he had meant it with every fibre of his being. He was conscious of the great sense of triumph to think that even though Diana would never know he was fulfilling his promise.

Then the cry came again, strangled, weaker, more despairing, the cry that might have come from a child or from one of the lost lambs which he and Shurey had sought for together one bitter March month after a heavy fall of snow.

"FIFTY-THIRD INSTALLMENT" Her hands shook a little, making the bottle rattle against the glass as she measured out some of the drops.

It had a nasty bitter taste. "That's because I haven't put any water with it," Diana thought vaguely. "I don't care, perhaps it will really make me sleep this time."

She swallowed and made a little grimace as she crept back to bed. Why were all the things that were supposed to be good for "one's naps?"

CHAPTER XXII Jones was putting the pony and trap away in the stable when Mr. Shurey came down the yard, a giant figure looming out of the gray mist, "figure looms out of the gray mist," he said, "put me, away yet."

"There's some things for Hath-bone's."

Jones turned around. "It'll be difficult to get so far in this fog," he said rather sullenly. The farmer frowned.

"When I was your age I didn't argue about things being difficult," he said bluntly. "If you go up to the house the missus'll give you that to go."

Jones shrugged his shoulders and walked on. He did not really object to the fog, but he was in no mood to go. There was a dark spot in his mind whenever he thought of Donal Rathbone.

He felt as if during the past weeks since he first met her, she had unconsciously been giving him broken pieces of a puzzle, which had slowly and carefully formed themselves into one, until this morning, he suddenly realized that was complete. And it was Rathbone's face that he saw in the finished picture.

THE PICTURES

The first appearance together of the screen's first actor, John Barrymore, and his equal, Ingrid Bergman, in "Arsene Lupin," comes to the Orpheum Theatre this week, Thursday, Friday and Saturday, July 21, 22, and 23.

This picture is a case for Joe Judson for those filmgoers who have been looking for something different and above the average in the way of screen fare.

Here we have two of the cinema's most expert proponents of the art of dramatic acting, brilliant characterization and sophisticated comedy, and Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer may be congratulated on providing the two stars with a vehicle worthy of their talent. For "Arsene Lupin," the egotistical, often intensely dramatic, but always extremely amusing story of the suave and debonair thief who poses as a French nobleman and leads an infatuated and bewildered detective's merry chase about the haunts of Paris, has just these elements of excitement and plot movement, romantic love interest and smart humor which the two celebrated Barrymore brothers are so well equipped to handle.

The principal character of the chief, Arsene Lupin, and the detective, Guichard, are already familiar to readers of Maurice Le Blant's mystery stories. In the film, they receive an added dash-and-blood reality and contrive to be as intriguing and entertaining as the adventures of the hide-and-seek school of mystery drama as has been seen in the talking films in several seasons.

Marilyn Miller stars in "Bunny," coming to the Orpheum Theatre Thursday, Friday and Saturday of next week, July 22, 23, and 24. The new sweetheart of the screen is in a most entrancing picture. Love came to the little strong girl, but she had to marry another man to be near him. Wonderful charm, graceful dancing, romantic appeal—Marilyn Miller has them all in "Bunny."

It cost nearly $12,000,000 to provide London with water in the last 12 months.

INDIAN AGENT IS MADE A BLACKFOOT CHIEF

O. H. Goodenough, Indian agent at the Blackfoot Reserve, Glendon was made an Indian chief at the recent tea dance on the reservation. The honoring of the name Chief Eagle Plume came as a complete surprise to Mr. Goodenough, and was accompanied by much Indian pomp and ceremony. The Indians conferred the high honor on Mr. Goodenough in token of the high esteem in which they held by the Blackfeet a line of appreciation for the splendid work he has done for the tribe.
